"For about two years I was troubled with sciatica. Great aches broke out every little while. I followed prescriptions without obtaining any relief. At last I procured a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it did me good, and finally cured me. I have never had any sciatica trouble since and never felt as well in my life as I do now. I have always been afflicted with sick headaches, but since I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills I am cured of these and I can speak only in praise of the medicine that has done so much for me." THE FARMER IN POLITICS.

Question Discussed at Maple River Farmers' Club Meeting. One of Most Successful Meetings in History of Club. Good Program Well Rendered.

The Maple River Farmers' Club held a most enjoyable meeting at the home of E. J. Cook Thursday afternoon, July 29.

Promptly at one o'clock, in response to a hearty invitation, a representative of THE OWOSSO TIMES drove into the yard of this well known homestead and then after seeing his horse put out, went around from the great roomy barn and stables to the front of the house, there to find himself among the very advance guard of the assembling company. A few comparative strangers, invited guests from other clubs who were among the first to arrive, made a few introductions necessary but as might be expected introductions were the exception and not the rule. Then, too, even though there were men there who had never met before they had at least heard of each other and this with common interests made them friends at once.

The teams now kept driving into the yard at short intervals though the weather began to assume a thoroughly threatening appearance, and thus while the storm, which delayed some of the Owosso guests, was marshaling its forces apparently from every part of the sky and, lowering cast a heavy shadow over all, the conversation which began between two or three grew until it embraced one big circle then, becoming unwieldy it broke up into separate conversations and bits of social chat among the groups into which the gathering disintegrated.

The threatening storm then threw down a light misty rain which drove the assembled men and women inside the spacious house but only for a few minutes for the storm passed by, scarcely dampening the grass.

Once again out on the roomy lawn, at half past two, club members and visitors ranged their camp chairs around the secretary's table and the organ, and in a few minutes were called to order by President P. B. Reynolds, who announced that the time had come for beginning their program and the program was then carried out, the first program which the club ever gave out of doors, the first number of which was a solo by Claude Martin; then followed the devotional exercises by the Chaplain, Mrs. M. E. Seeley, who read a psalm and offered an earnest prayer; and last an anthem by the choir.

Business matters were then taken up in routine order; the report of the secretary, Miss Otie Cook; remarks by Mr. Frank Whelan, on the coming county picnic of farmers' clubs; roll call; and the election of officers.

Did You Take Scott's Emulsion

through the winter? If so, we are sure it quieted your cough, healed the rawness in your throat, increased your weight, gave you more color, and made you feel better in every way. But perhaps your cough has come back again, or you are getting a little thin and pale.

Then, why not continue the same helpful remedy right through the summer? It will do you as much good as when the weather is cold.

Its persistent use will certainly give you a better appetite and a stronger digestion.

It will cure your weak throat and heal your inflamed lungs. It will cure every case of consumption, when a cure is possible.

Don't be persuaded to take something they say is just as good.

ers. The date of the county picnic had been made August 27, Saturday, said Mr. Whelan, and it would be held at Caledonia Park on that date from early in the forenoon until as late as they wished to stay. But one speaker had been secured through Gov. Pingree had been invited, but A. C. Bird, whom they had secured, was a good speaker and in fact he was the first state organizer of farmers' clubs and on that account alone his address could not fail to be interesting. The election resulted in the choice of Theron Gladden for president; Ira Snyder, vice president; Miss Otie Cook, secretary; Mrs. M. E. Seeley, chaplain; C. P. Reynolds, reporter; Mrs. Lewis, Roy Seeley, Mrs. McCullough and Leon More, music committee.

The chief topic of the afternoon, the farmers' duties in nominating, electing and influencing members of the legislature, was then taken up and considered in a clear cut sensible way by Mr. E. J. Cook, although as he said he had not expected to speak on the subject in this state, he said, the farmers have one-half the votes and pay seventy per cent of the taxes. But he did not believe that the farmers should necessarily have either one-half or seven-tenths of the influence in legislation. Influence should be in proportion to ability to influence for the right rather than either proportion of votes or taxes, and the farmer's duty was to fit himself to be able to influence for the right, to be posted on legislation, to know what the different bills were for and who supported them before attempting to interfere, in a word to thoroughly inform himself on such matters but more especially on the character of the men sent from the caucuses to the various conventions. He should know both whom and what he wants. But it is not farmers or lawyers or doctors that are wanted, but men—men of character and of principles.

Hudson Sheldon, who was called on for remarks, would place the duty in sending the right man to the legislature believing that any person who is fit to be sent will do his duty. What control was necessary he would exercise by the possibility of re-election or defeat. He believes that general principles in politics are better for farmers than minutiae, but would have every farmer keep himself posted, and advises them to attend both caucuses and election but to attend the caucuses any way.

Prosecuting Attorney Chandler made some very interesting remarks in an amusing vein. He liked a suggestion made by Mr. Cook that the farmer after preparing himself should make his influence felt, by getting into the ring and having a hand in the running of the machine and said he thought the farmers had been too long contented to simply furnish the grease for the machine, while someone else ran it and got the profit from it. His description of the swapping of delegates was quite amusing and though of course exaggerated contained at least a grain of truth. Mr. Chandler seemed to believe that the farmer should use means to influence representatives after they are elected, to look after their interests, telling them that they were the only class who did not keep delegates there to look after their interests and saying that if they did not look after them no one would.

Mr. John Whelan, a guest from the North Newburg Club thought the key note in politics was, What is right. The question of politics had always raised a barrier in such meetings as this, but the time had come when all questions should be looked on from all sides. The torch light procession and the crowd should no longer influence men's minds but fireless study should be the controlling force. No question is more important to the farmer than the question of politics, for this government is not necessarily a divine institution and, suppose it should crumble, what would be its value then. Besides our government is as yet but an experiment which we have a peculiar interest in proving a success.

Mr. A. Wrigley, a representative from the Oakgrove Farmers Club, believed that they were on the right track when they were talking of keeping posted and of studying subjects of current interest. He illustrated his remarks by telling of his own study of the initiative and referendum system and the theory of proportional representation.

Senator H. S. Hadsall had arrived on the scene by this time and, as he had been expected to speak on the subject he was called forward. He did not see that any greater duty devolved on the farmer than on everybody else. It is the duty of everyone to see that men, honest, able men, are nominated for all offices. The farmer might go further he said and insist that no one should go who did not know something about farming but if anything is done the caucuses must be attended, such work could not be done if left for the convention. He did not agree with a reason given by the governor for sending rich men only to the legislature viz: that the poor man could not afford to go and that if he did go he would be liable to be bought up. The senator did not believe that the poor man was any more likely to be bought than any one else and believed he could be just as honest. He thinks nearly everyone goes there to do his best. After telling of the good qualities which a representative of the people should have the senator very shyly and humorously suggested that he knew of one man who probably combined all those qualifications and a tear gathered in his eye as he said he did not know yet whether he would run for a second term or not.

The program was varied after these speeches by a humorous recitation by Glenn Fuller, a select reading by Frank Moore and solos by Claude Martin and Roy Seeley.

A short paper was then read by Mr. Bert Cook reviewing the proceedings of the last session of the legislature. The session might almost be reviewed, he said, in the language of the Irishmen who were down to watch the passage of the fast express, "Begorra an' there she comes" exclaimed one, and "Begorra an' there she goes" said by the other in the same breath. The governor's motives had been questioned but the war cry had been equal taxation on all property. One-third of the property now bears but one-fifth of the burden of taxation. The governor said in reference to what was accomplished by the legislature, "We've got the records on record" but Mr. Cook thought that when a legislature, or a senate rather, so completely ignored the popular will as did the senate at the special session it would be of some benefit in setting the people to thinking and in inducing them to give "the ring" a lesson.

Stanley E. Parkhill was called on for remarks and responded in his usual energetic way. He had thought that to say the legislature had come and gone told about the whole story but if it taught the people, or awoke them, as Mr. Cook had suggested it would have done some good. He did not agree with the senator that farmers had no greater responsibilities than other men and he proved his point by showing how easily a few good men by working in the townships could control the caucuses and send good delegates, and how difficult the same thing was in the cities; equal effort in the country brings far greater results than in the city. Purification must start from a place where purity exists. Mr. Parkhill commended the work of the farmers' clubs and said that this discussion of problems of the home seemed to him to be of the first importance while he would put politics next and ahead of the tilling of the soil, for though there is no greater stickler for improved farm methods than he, yet the farmers would attend to their land and make their living anyway. They could not with right escape their political duties owing to their peculiar advantages.

After a song by the quartette, Mrs. Geo. Martin read a paper on some of the features of home life in the country. The life of the farmer's wife was by no means necessarily a hard, narrow, or a disagreeable one though it was not by any means a life of ease. Among the various suggestions she made some were of especial value. She spoke of the organization of home reading circles operated in connection with the Agricultural College assisted by its library as being an especially good policy. The program was then closed by a reading by Miss Pugsley and a solo by Mrs. Will McCullough.

By this time the afternoon had gone and without delay the members and the visiting friends seated themselves in double rows to hold the lap-board tables more conveniently, and then were served with a picnic supper by the younger members of the club. And say, you never ate any better bread or any sweeter butter, or cold meat which tasted better than it did there. Even the ice cream and cake seemed a little sweeter and nicer than usual. But the supper was soon over and after lingering awhile longer the members and guests began to separate.

The horses were then brought out again, goodbyes were said to the gracious and charming host and hostess and the greater part of the company of one hundred fifty people were on their way home just when the sun, big and ruddy from peering through the denser, moister air nearer ground, began to sink out of sight behind the woods and distant hills of grain, leaving above it a bank of bright red clouds with rich golden yellow fringes which gradually lost their lustre and took on a dimmer color as the red itself faded away into the mellow twilight—a perfect sunset to close a well spent day.

The following visitors were present from other clubs: From the North Newburg Club Mr. and Mrs. J. S. and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lemon, W. H. Devereaux, Mr. and Mrs. Derr Devereaux, Mrs. Della Carruthers, John Carruthers, Misses Grow and Fannie Carruthers, Clark, Charles and John Whelan.

From the Oakgrove Club, Mr. and Mrs. A. Wrigley and Mrs. A. S. Holmes.

The full intensity of living is reached only by the perfectly healthy. Bickness discounts the capacity for enjoyment. If his body is all out of order and run down, he will not be able to enjoy anything, no matter how full of enjoyment it may be for other people. If he is just a little bit out of order, if he is not sick, but doesn't feel just right" he will only be able to enjoy things in a half-hearted sort of way. The nearer he is to being perfectly well, the nearer will his capacity for enjoyment be perfect. If this condition doesn't exist, something ought to be done. That means nine cases in ten the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It works directly on the digestive organs, and on the blood and through these on every tissue in the body. It makes the appetite good, digestion and nutrition perfect and supplies rich, red blood to all the tissues, building up solid, healthful flesh.

Help a Worthy Cause.

The board of managers of the Dorcas Society fully appreciating the liberal gifts of our citizens and friends in the county, towards the support of the Dorcas Home, feel, at this time, that an appeal must be made for the continuance of your good deeds that this work may be carried on. Fifteen children are now in the home, under the care and good management of a capable matron, whose lives, were it not for this place of refuge, would be sad indeed, and the good seed sown here may spring up and bear a hundred fold, to not only the little ones, but to you who give for this human object in our midst. The home is open every day for inspection, and all are cordially invited to call and become acquainted with these children, and judge for yourselves as to the good being accomplished.

In order to bring this work more closely to your notice, a reception and freewill offering will be held at the Home, 614 N. Hickory street, Friday afternoon, Aug. 5th, from 3 to 6 p. m. Articles needed: Cloth for underwear, pants, night robes and sheets, also thread, shirt buttons, safety pins, crash for towels, calico for aprons, and dress goods, either cotton or wool.

Money and provisions are very acceptable. Our merchants may have remnants that could be used to advantage, and by notifying Mrs. E. F. Dawes, or sending to the home, they could be used at once, as some of our little folks are in great need.

It is hoped this invitation will be accepted by all, and the ladies of the society will meet you, and gratefully accept any offering that may be used in caring for these "Christ's little ones."

Trade Balance, $615,259,024.

The sum named above represents the excess of exports over imports shown in the completed trade statistics for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898. This is more than double the amount of any favorable trade balance hitherto recorded by the United States.

In every detail which contributes toward the grand total of national prosperity this first fiscal year of the Dingley tariff is a record breaker.

The exports for the year were $1,231,311,868, which surpasses by $180,318,312, the exports of last year under the Wilson-Gorman low Tariff and no Tariff.

The exports for 1898 were almost exactly double the imports, as $1,231,311,868 is to $616,052,844.

The total of imports for 1898, $616,052,844, is $148,677,568 less than the total for 1897, and is the smallest volume of imports recorded since 1879.

In 1879 the amount of imported merchandise per capita of population was $8.99. In 1898, with an estimated population of 73,000,000, the amount per capita is $8.55. This is the lowest amount of imported merchandise per capita recorded in the past 31 years, or since the average bulk of importations, interrupted by the Civil War, regained normal proportions.

During 1898 the excess of gold imports over gold exports has been $99,849,000, while the exports of silver coin and bullion exceeded the imports by $44,052,000.

Taking these figures in connection with those of the merchandise traffic there is an apparent credit balance in favor of the U. S. of $354,000,000.

If an allowance is made for a permanent debt on account of freight charges on American commerce carried in foreign vessels, interest on foreign loans and expenses of travelers abroad, amounting to $150,000,000 per year, the net balance above this amount to the credit of American merchants and financiers would stand at $384,000,000. The corresponding balance for 1897 was $124,000,000, and the gain in actual cash balance for 1898, the first year of restored protection, is $260,000,000.

The condensed record of the year, which includes eleven months of fair and intelligent protection as contrasted with the preceding twelve months of low Tariff and no Tariff, stands thus:

Gain on exports, $10,819,312.

Decrease in imports, $148,677,568.

Excess of exports over imports, $615,259,024.

It is a record unparalleled in the world's history of commerce.

Eighth District Congressional Contest.

From the Detroit Journal.

Saginaw, Mich., Aug. 1, 1898.

As the time approaches for the republican convention for the eighth congressional district, interest gradually increases and party "war horses" have begun to arouse themselves and take observation of what promises to be one of the most exciting campaigns that has been waged in this district for years. Old political prognosticators shake their heads significantly and advise the active members of the party to go into the fight undivided and with a determination to support the choice of the convention, to a man.

As demonstrated by republican defeats, both county and congressional, two years ago, a condition of perfect harmony is absolutely necessary at every stage of the fight this fall if the party hopes to overcome Brucker majorities in Saginaw county, especially: Two years ago Linton's defeat was mostly due to losses in Saginaw county incurred by his radical sectarian views and the "silver wave" which struck voters in the rural districts after the Bryan campaigning expedition. The silver sentiment having been considerably dissipated in the county during the past two years will detract from Brucker's strength, it being assured that his renomination will be unanimous. This and a complete restoration of party harmony will make republican victory less a difficulty.

Republican leaders recognize that the rift in the party ranks in this county must be closed, and hope to have a candidate nominated who will restore complete harmony. Last spring an attempt was made to restore harmony, by the formation of a Blaine club, which, though it flourished for a few months did little towards healing the breach in the ranks of the party, which still exists, thought not to so great an extent as two years ago.

Within the few past weeks several conferences have been held among prominent politicians from Clinton, Tuscola, Shiawassee and Saginaw counties, and it has been mutually agreed that the nomination shall come to Saginaw county. Not that the nomination logically belongs to this county, for it does not, but because the democratic candidate is a Saginaw man, and his majorities in Saginaw county will be most difficult to overcome.

Clinton county has a candidate in the person of Hon. W. A. Norton, of St. Johns, but it is said that he has agreed to withdraw his name from the race, throwing his support to Saginaw county, provided a harmony candidate can be selected from this city.

At this place the woods are full of congressional aspirants. Fully a dozen prominent citizens have been mentioned as possibilities, any of whom would make acceptable candidates for congress. The most prominent of them are Ald. Joseph W. Fordney and Hon. Emory Townsend, ex-state senator. Both of these gentlemen have signalled that they are in the race to stay, and told the correspondent of THE JOURNAL that they intend to put up a hot fight.

Leaders freely state that either Fordney or Townsend would make a satisfactory candidate, and either gentleman will be able to poll a strong vote throughout the county. What is still more favorable to a republican victory in the eighth district this fall, the two Saginaw candidates most prominently identified in the race are out-and-out Pinkree men.

Mr. Fordney has made a good record in the city council as fighter for the interests of Saginaw, is an employer of labor of no small proportion, being at the head of the largest basket manufacturing establishment in the west, and has the credit of securing the famous Court street bridge for the citizens of the west side, a charter condition which the people of the east side had vigorously opposed for several years. Mr. Townsend has served a term as state senator and enjoys a good law practice in this city.

Mr. Norton, of St. Johns, denies having stated that he would withdraw if Saginaw county united upon a candidate. He is in the race to stay and believes that some county other than Saginaw is entitled to the nomination and that with a vigorous campaign the nominee of the convention can be elected.
